About the Book

In the series: Women on Frontpage, this volume is an investigation to women's varied experiences in an increasingly globalized world. In situations where women have been historically repressed or discriminated under a patriarchal division of labour, some features of globalization may have liberating consequences. While globalization presents opportunities to some women also causes marginalization of many others. Women play a distinct role in globalization, experience more harmful effects, and often become a constituency for anti-systemic movements.

The present volume will throw focus on the issue of women's power in the era of globalization. The contributors analysed the gender politics across the globe touching a number of continents and sub-continents. This book aims to contribute to key debates in this area by exploring critical themes and issues in women's access to power and resources in a globalizing world.
